- c. Your customers (e.g. slaughterhouse, livestock transport (carrier), livestock company)
- d. Your suppliers (e.g. livestock company, feed producer).

3. Where appropriate, inform your employees about the incident. Instruct them to refrain from making any statements vis-à-vis third parties (e.g. customers, journalists) and to forward corresponding enquiries directly to the person authorised to deal with the case in question.

What happens after QS receives your incident report?

In close cooperation with you, QS supports you in your crisis management. This involves all measures to prevent damage to your company, other scheme participants and the QS scheme and to resolve the existing problems as rapidly as possible

However, we can only provide support and prevent damage if inform us in good time and accurately.

What are "critical incidents"?

All incidents that pose a threat to humans, animals, the environment, assets or general confidence in food can become a critical incident for individual scheme participants, the feed sector or the entire supply chain.

The following are examples of incidents that can affect you directly:

- One of your suppliers violates requirements laid down in the laws governing feed.
- Your farm/business is suspended by public authorities (e.g. because of an epidemic) or there is a suspicion of a notifiable animal epidemic.
- A food product you have brought into circulation does not meet the requirements for food safety (e.g. residue exceeding).
- The media report negatively or in sensational fashion about your company (e.g. in context with animal welfare).

When must critical incidents be reported?

In addition to your information obligations vis-à-vis QS, you are also obliged to submit reports to the regulatory authorities in many cases.

In particular, a reporting obligation exists if a food product that is brought into circulation possibly no longer meets the requirements for food safety. Each individual case must always be taken seriously.

Who can use this notification form?

The notification form is designed to help scheme participants in the animal husbandry or livestock transport to submit reports to QS and provide initial information to the competent regulatory authority.

Please store it in an easily accessible place together with your documents for your own crisis management.
